[06-Mar-2010 .: puncture wound] Edit

S: Seen at walk-in this morning, strolled in for dressing of a puncture wound on his chest, he says he was innocently walking along when he suddenly slipped and fell down, landing on a sharpened wooden fence post with his chest...hmmm

O: Irregular avulsed laceration over the sternum, superficial, some bruising, little bleeding, a few wooden splinters removed from the wound, dressing applied, inspection of his hands and arms did not reveal any cuts or abrasions

A: Superficial injury over sternum

P: I suggested I apply a garlic poultice on the wound, but the patient didn't seem to think that was funny, refused a tetanus shot, follow up again in a day or two for review of dressing, pt says he doesn't feel pain and therefore doesn't need pain meds

A Standard Rich Text Letter

This eForm provides a method to produce multipage letters with markup attributes including bold, font size, underline, italic and database lookups that allow for pasting of attending doctor, referral doctor and patient information. All the button images (.png), the javascript (.js) the help file (editor_help.html) and the templates (blank.html, MissedAppointment.html, certificate.html, narcotic.html, custom.html and so on) need to get uploaded into your images folder. The main editor file (Editor-For-XX.html) needs to be uploaded as a form. This version is tuned for Firefox and works the best with FF2+. IE Chrome and Opera browsers have been tested and will open and write letters, but may not have all the bells and whistles supported. The latest version has 26 formatting functions and support to back port spelling for IE. Cut and paste are supported through keyboard shortcuts as they are variably implemented across browsers.

Find e-Forms on this site and upload them to your OSCAR installation

Send this — Print this —

For general instructions on how to get and upload the OSCAR*Letter* and other eForms to your system have a look at this tutorial, also at www.oscarcanada.com :

<http://www.oscarcanada.org/oscar-users/oscar-screencasts/UploadingEForms.pdf/view>

Then follow Peter Hutten-Czapski's specific upload instructions for OSCAR*Letter*. Some of his files, such as the JavaScript file that does the heavy lifting behind the scenes, are uploaded to your "images" library on your OSCAR server, even though it is not really an image.

Dear Sir or Madame

Edward Cullen was seen at this office today. This patient is severely stressed. In our medical opinion this patient needs at least a month of healing, yoga, raw food diet, software development and spiritual rebalancing at our facility. For this reason Edward Cullen can not be contacted during this period and will not be able to perform any duties at work.

Reminders

Open a test patient chart and test drive your brand new form letter template. Note how the date and the patient name and address auto-populates.

Imagine the possibilities...

Did I just hear you ask about how you can assign your own new names to your new templates, especially when you start making multiple new templates?

It is quite easily doable, but...well, go get a cup of coffee first, this gets a little more involved.

OK, got your coffee? Let us crack our knuckles go to your eForm library, pop the hood and edit some HTML code.

You've just navigated to the line in the code that defines the names of all the templates. The last template we uploaded was called "custom"

```
>FDR</option> <option value="CoverLetter">cover letter</option> <option value="custom">custom</option> </select>;
```

So, for example, the tag that defines the name of the "CoverLetter" template I made on my system is:
<option value="CoverLetter">cover letter</option>

```
<FDR</option> <option value="CoverLetter">cover letter</option> <option value="custom">custom</option> </select>;
```

So, what you have to do is stick to the same format to insert the new name for your new template, and insert this into this line in the code:
<option value="new_name">new_name</option>

```
FDR</option> <option value="CoverLetter">cover letter</option> <option value="custom">custom</option> </select>;
```
